Bratton Castle (also known as Bratton Camp) is a bivallate Iron Age hill fort on Bratton Down, at the western edge of the hill. It was constructed in several phases over a period of 300 years, from around 800 BC to 550 BC. The outer rampart is 150 yards long and the inner rampart is 130 yards long. The hillfort was used as a settlement during the Iron Age. The first phase of the hillfort, which dates to the early Iron Age, was constructed on a promontory ridge. In the later Iron Age, the hillfort was expanded and fortified, with the construction of additional ramparts and ditches.
